

PARROT-WISE

Why shouldn't I get a parrot?

- It is illegal
- Wild parrots are unhealthy and generally don't live long in captivity
- Parrots are wild animals and therefore do not make good pets
- Belize relies on abundant wildlife to generate income from tourists - taking birds from the wild reduces population numbers

Is it really illegal to keep a parrot? Yes it is illegal. Forest Department may grant a permit if your bird is healthy and you comply with regulations and minimum standards. Contact Forest Department or visit our website for more information

Do captive parrots in Belize need special care?

Yes! Belizean parrots know that they are wild parrots. Every day they hear and see other parrots flying free, and they want to do the same.

Why did my baby bird die? Captive birds die from bad diet or lack of food and water, inappropriate caging and perches, lack of shelter, sickness, injury, and even sadness.

How long should Polly live? Wild parrots can live up to 90 years, but most captive parrots die within 5 years.

How smart are parrots? They are as smart as a 3 year old child. They can think, evaluate, reason and remember. They are emotional, intelligent, wild creatures that require special care and attention.

How can I get him to talk more? Take appropriate care of your licensed bird and he could live for 50 years or more -the longer he lives the more he learns.

"I can't cope with Polly any more!"

That's simple: call the Forest Department on 822 1524 or Belize Bird Rescue on 610 0400. Your bird can be rehabilitated and eventually released into the wild.

PLEASE: don't just let him go – he will not survive.

NOT JUST A PRETTY POLLY

A healthy and safe home

Enclosure: Forest Department minimum standards state that an indoor cage should be at least 4 feet around and an outdoor cage must be 8-foot around. Use ½" wire mesh so rats, snakes and possums can't reach in. Provide a covered area for protection from weather extremes and an open area where he can choose rain or sunshine. Parrots hate to be at ground level: The top perch must be 5-feet off the ground. It's more natural if his cage is positioned under a tree.

Perches: Use different thicknesses of sticks at different heights. Secure them so they don't twist around. Give fresh green branches and leaves for him to chew. Replace perches regularly

Bathing: Take him out in the rain or use a gentle spray-bottle of warm water. Bathing keeps his feathers clean and healthy.

Playing: Parrots are social birds and they live in large flocks. Boredom makes them aggressive and miserable. he may even pluck out his own feathers. He needs toys and a friend (human or parrot) exactly like human children. Give him lots to do, and loads of love and attention - being alone is torture for a parrot

Take time for your bird

- 1. Free Time: let him roam outside of his cage as often as you can. Parrots are a lot nicer when they're free.
- 2. Play Time: he needs toys and interesting things to chew on and explore. Bored birds bite.
- 3. Social Time: sit still and let him climb on and around you. Only cuddle and scratch him if he allows you to.
- 4. Quiet Time: too much noise and fuss can frighten him and he'll bite. Make sure he gets a full night's sleep.
- 5. Time Out: sometime's he's just plain grumpy, so leave him in peace for a while. You may think you're in charge, but you're not!

YOUR TIME: If you don't have the time, then don't keep a parrot

WING CLIPPING

Cutting a bird's wing does not make him tame. That can only be achieved by hard work and dedication.

He needs wings to keep control body temperature and keep dry, for protection, to exercise muscles and to control landings and avoid injury, so

If you must do it, do it right:

You do not need to clip all of the wing feathers

- Never cut growing feathers: they have nerves and a blood supply and your bird could bleed to death. Growing feathers have a white sheath and/or the shaft appears darker than the others
- Never clip baby parrots: they need at least 3 months with full wings for their muscles to develop properly
- Use sharp nail clippers to avoid scissor injury
- Clip both wings in the same way. Mismatched wings cause uncontrolled, painful falls
- Do NOT cut his tail feathers: that's just ugly

FOOD GLORIOUS FOOD

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING:

Banana, mango, watermelon, papaya, unsalted nuts, sunflower seeds, sugarcane, figs, oranges, kinep, plums, celery, spinach, pineapple, carrot, okra, craboo, hibiscus flowers, fresh corn, dried yellow corn, green beans, ackee, all apples & plums, grapes, chilli peppers, in fact most fruits and vegetables and even flowers. Note: Too many sunflower seeds will make him fat. Experts advise not to give peanuts as they may carry a fungus that is toxic to birds: .

SICK-MAKING: salt, alcohol, fizzy drinks, sweets, sugary cakes, salty chips etc.

POISONOUS: chocolate, avocado, onion.

ALWAYS: CLEAN, FRESH DRINKING WATER

Play Time

Making toys for your parrot

Join together craft beads & popsicle sticks, wood blocks, small bush sticks, sugar cane slices, plastic bottle tops, leather strips, leaves, coconut, flowers, pasta pieces, toilet roll inners, clean rags, buttons, nuts, mango pits and baby toys. Connect them with pipe- cleaners, ropes, string, vines and cable ties (also excellent for securing branches for perches)

CARING FOR YOUR CAPTIVE PARROT

How to care for your licensed bird to give him a long and happy life as a member of your family

This guide is intended for owners with birds that are already in captivity

It is illegal to capture parrots from the wild or to hold them in captivity. If you have a bird, you must get Forest Department Permit

Parrots are protected under the Wildlife Protection Act, Chapter 220 of the laws of Belize
